My interest in learning English started when I was child to 8 years old, because my father used to travel abroad to work and brought some tapes with international songs and I loved to listen to them and I liked to watch all related to international artists and others cultures.

I've started to study English at regular school when I was 12 years old my teacher wasn't so good and teach us basically the to be verb in a traditional method, but I continued liking English and having the hope one day study in a language course.

Years later my mother register me in an language course ,it was realization in my life, in that epoch I wanted to know to study English I used to spend almost all day practicing but two year later I had to quit the course. Seven years later I restarted the course and got to finish it. In 2007 started to teach in an language course where I studied a place where I had incredible students one year after, I started to attend liberal arts course to upgrade my knowledge. Today I don't teach in English course anymore, at present I work in a public school. Even with all these experience I don't have a good fluency in English I need to improve my speaking and listening but, I'm working in it. I'm very happy in doing this specialization and to be learning more and more to improve my practice. Having contact with this language has done good for my soul.
